BTS Reunion on the Horizon: Will ARMY See Members Together by June 21?Jin, the Lead Singer of BTS, Returns with His Bandmates After Military ServiceJin is reunifying with his bandmates, including Jungkook, V, Jimin, Suga, j-hope and RM, as all members finish mandatory military service in South Korea.Published By: Shrishti NegiTrending DeskLast Updated:May 15, 2025, 12:57 ISTBTS consists of Jin, Suga, J-Hope, RM, Jimin, V, and Jungkook. (Photo: X)The wait is finally coming to an end for millions of BTS fans worldwide. With just a few weeks to go before the groups military hiatus ends, the fandom is already buzzing. BTS leader RM recently gave ARMY a reason to celebrate when he posted a D-30" countdown on May 11, which hinted that the groups return is officially on the horizon.The post featured a cartoon brown bear holding a sign that read D-30." It signalled that RM and V will be discharged from their mandatory military service on June 10. It didnt take long for fans to decode the message, and within minutes, social media was filled with excitement and emotional responses from ARMY members across the globe.As of now, BTS members are on staggered military timelines. Jin, the oldest member, was the first to enlist back in December 2022 and was discharged on June 12, 2024. J-Hope followed suit in April 2023 and completed his service in October 2024. The remaining five members RM, V, Jimin, Jungkook, and Suga are still serving but are expected to return soon.Suga, who began his alternative social service on September 22, 2023, due to a previous shoulder surgery, will be the last to finish. By the third week of June 2025, all members will have completed their military duties.Heres a look at the expected discharge dates of the remaining BTS members:RM (Kim Nam-joon): June 10, 2025V (Kim Tae-hyung): June 10, 2025Jimin (Park Ji-min): June 11, 2025Jungkook (Jeon Jungkook): June 11, 2025Suga (Min Yoon-gi): June 21, 2025With the countdown now in motion, fans havent just stopped at D-30." On social media, hashtags like D-40" have also started trending, which marks the final milestone when BTS will be completely reunited after Sugas discharge.One user expressed, OMG! I cant believe it." Another added, Theyre going to be home next month. Im just glad and dont have words to explain."Others poured their emotions out on social media with messages like God, I miss them even worse as we get closer. My level of yearning is like a physical ache #BTSComeback."BTS officially paused group activities in December 2022 to allow each member to fulfil their national service obligations, which are mandatory for able-bodied men in South Korea.News movies BTS Reunion 2025: RM, V, Jimin, Jungkook And Suga's Military Discharge DatesJimin and Suga Reveal BTS's Plans for 2025Jimim recently appeared on Suga's drinking show Suchwita, where he talked about his personal life with his fellow bandmate. He revealed that Suga got him his first drink, Soju, and shared his dreams for the future. When asked when BTS would return, Jimin wished to travel back in time to 2025, saying "We'd all be back together." However, he also acknowledged not knowing what they would talk about or where they would begin.Suga added that he is excited because by then, all members will have released singles or albums, allowing them to create an album and discuss themselves. He believes it'll be fun for the group.Their conversation gave fans reassurance that the band members are staying in touch during their break. Following Jin's short vacation, his six bandmates visited him and celebrated his break. It is reported that all seven members will have completed their mandatory military service by next month, marking their long-awaited return to fans.With Jin and J-Hope already discharged last year, the remaining members are set to be discharged soon. They have been connecting with fans through solo releases during their service hiatus. Jimin's single "Who" recently broke a record for K-pop on the Billboard Hot 100.The group has stated that they will resume group activities once all members return from service. However, experts agree that an immediate comeback is unlikely due to the need for thoughtful planning and preparation. HYBE CEO Park Jiwon emphasized that the company is working with top-tier composers and discussing their vision for the future.BTS's highly anticipated comeback is on the horizon, with a potential debut in late 2024 or early 2025. The group will likely take some time to prepare after their discharge from military service, with each member embarking on solo projects in the meantime. Jin's upcoming solo concert tour and RM's promise to "share" new music and words have fans eagerly awaiting the group's return. Even if a full comeback takes longer than expected, BTS members may still make individual appearances before then.As the group enters a new phase of their careers, they are expected to deliver more mature and powerful messages through their music. Experts believe that their solo projects have helped each member grow musically, setting the stage for a successful reunion. Lee Ji-young, a research professor, commented that BTS's reunion will likely result in "music and storytelling that far surpasses their previous work."The K-pop industry has been showing signs of stagnation following its explosive growth during the COVID-19 pandemic. BTS's return could be just what the industry needs to regain momentum, with many experts believing it could inject new life into the scene.However, Hybe, BTS's agency, is facing serious questions as Chairman Bang Si-hyuk is under investigation by South Korea's financial watchdog over alleged fraud and unfair trading practices. The Financial Supervisory Service (FSS) is examining claims that Bang misled early investors during Hybe's pre-IPO phase in 2019.FSS may expedite the case against prosecutors, with an ongoing police investigation also underway.Some individuals have commented on this news, expressing various opinions.One user stated, All K-pop groups are built on fraudulent charts and numbers. Another person defended Bang Si-hyuk, saying, No! A former HYBE executive is under investigation for alleged insider trading in 2021.A third individual wrote, Hybe is known for being untrustworthy.The situation centers on Hybe's financial dealings, causing concern among fans expecting a smooth BTS return.Although the group is expected to reunite later this year, once all seven members complete their military service by June 21, the timeline remains uncertain.Jin and J-Hope have already returned, with RM and V due to finish service on June 10, followed by Jungkook and Jimin the next day.Hybe has confirmed new BTS content and performances are in development.CEO Park Ji-won stated that members would need time to prepare creatively after their service ends.The group's hiatus continues while members pursue solo endeavors and complete military service requirements.When the break was first announced, the label explained it wouldnt be too long of a break, with BTS set to reconvene in 2025.However, chairman Bang Si-hyuk recently expressed uncertainty about this timeline, saying, We said we hope the members can resume in 2025, not will.'BTS will work together to achieve their goals but cannot guarantee a specific date.The remaining members are pursuing solo works, including J-Hope, who has initiated the enlistment process.Si-hyuk stated that the members' enlistment schedules are private information and will be disclosed transparently once confirmed.The contract renewal is also uncertain, with Si-hyuk saying, We still have time left (until the contract ends).BTS fans remain optimistic despite the uncertainty, expressing their faith in the band's future.The wait is almost over, as the highly anticipated BTS reunion is finally happening, marking the beginning of Festa 2025. After nearly two years, the group's dedicated fan base, ARMY, can breathe a sigh of relief as Jin and J-Hope have completed their military duties, and the remaining five members are set to return this June. The reunion is not just about the group's comeback but also about their growth and return to the music scene stronger than ever. With rumors circulating about a possible world tour in 2025 or 2026, fans are eagerly anticipating an official announcement. For new fans who joined after BTS went on hiatus, a quick recap of major events is necessary to understand the group's journey. Festa 2022 was an emotional moment for the group and their fans, as they opened up about their feelings, pressure, and exhaustion, ultimately deciding to take a break from group activities to focus on solo projects. The hiatus was tough for fans to process, but they respected the group's decision and supported their solo endeavors. Before enlisting, BTS gifted their fans with one final OT7 stage, Yet to Come in Busan, which was a cultural moment that showcased the group's energy and dedication to their craft. With the reunion just around the corner, fans are counting down the days until all seven members reunite again, and the excitement is palpable. The dates for the other members' return from military service have been announced: RM and V on June 10, Jimin and Jungkook on June 11, and Suga on June 21. As the purple wave crashes back in full force, fans are preparing themselves for the chaos that will follow, and the group's 12th anniversary celebrations are expected to be nothing short of spectacular.As individual artists, each BTS member poured their heart and soul into various music projects, showcasing a new side of themselves that had never been fully seen before. Jin's heartfelt ballad "The Astronaut" co-written with Chris Martin of Coldplay was a legendary moment when he performed it live in Argentina. J-Hope's gritty and experimental album "Jack In The Box" revealed his darker and more introspective personality. Meanwhile, RM's artistic masterpiece "Indigo" featured a range of musical collaborators, while Jungkook's "Golden" showcased his pop prowess and global appeal. Jimin's emotionally raw and vocally stunning album "Muse", Suga's intense and powerful "D-Day", and V's smooth and jazzy "Layover" were all released to critical acclaim. Each album served as a window into their personal growth, emotions, and artistry.Suga became the first BTS member to go on a solo tour with his "D-Day Tour", performing in major cities across Asia and the US. The energy of these shows was unmatched, with fans screaming every lyric and experiencing an unforgettable night. Meanwhile, Jungkook's visuals and campaign photos for Calvin Klein broke the internet, making him the brand ambassador's golden maknae.Even on hiatus, BTS members continued to break records, with Jimin's "Like Crazy" debuting at #1 on the Billboard Hot 100, making him the first South Korean soloist to achieve this. Jungkook's "Seven" also hit #1 and dominated the charts globally. Suga, Jimin, and Jungkook each appeared on The Tonight Show with Jimmy Fallon for promotions, delivering amazing performances, charming interviews, and viral moments. In a surprise move, Jungkook gave fans a free concert in Times Square, New York, at TSX Entertainment, leaving everyone in awe.The day Jin officially enlisted was met with collective tears from ARMYs around the world, as all six remaining members showed up to see him off.Heartwarming moments from BTS's journey? Yes, please! The bond between the members is palpable, and this chapter showcased some of their most iconic collaborations. Jimin x Taeyang - Vibe was a masterpiece of vocals and visuals, while RM x Megan Thee Stallion - Neva Play was pure fire. And who could forget V's stunning performance in IU's Love Wins All MV? Each member flexed their fashion king status as ambassadors for luxury brands: RM for Bottega Veneta, Suga for Valentino, Jin for Gucci, J-Hope for Louis Vuitton, V for Celine and Cartier, Jimin for Dior, and Jungkook for Calvin Klein. These campaigns weren't just endorsements; they were cultural moments.But that's not all - even while serving in the military, RM dropped his second solo album, Right Place, Wrong Person, which won four awards at Germany's Ciclope Festival. And then there was Jimin and Jungkook's beautiful travel series, Are You Sure?! on Disney+ Hotstar, where they explored new places and melted hearts with their chemistry. And let's not forget V's surprise appearance mid-way! After completing his enlistment, Jin returned like a king and was greeted by the rest of the members. The reunion photos? Iconic. The feels? Overwhelming.While Run BTS took a break, Jin launched his own variety-style show, Run Jin, available on YouTube. And did you know that Jin X Tom Cruise actually happened?! As for J-Hope, he went live for ARMYs after completing his service and proved once again that their connection with fans is the heart of everything. I attended his world tour in Singapore - it was one of the best nights of my life!But that's not all - Jin is back on his RunSEOKJIN EP Tour, performing across cities worldwide. And just when we thought we were safe, J-Hope came in with another...BTS to Reunite as OT7 in JuneThe concept photos for the group's return have been released, offering a glimpse into their highly anticipated comeback.
