I'm not a bot

I can't believe I've been teaching for almost 11 years and just recently discovered education.com! Boy have I been missing out! This site is a teacher's paradise! Not only do they have over 20,000 worksheets available for download...check out every thing else they offer! Over 350 Interactive Games You can even download and print Workbooks! The hands-on activity section is one of my favorites and with over 3,500 activities to choose from, there's sure to be something for everyone. Over 1,300 Lesson Plans! Nearly 400 exercise downloads to give your students additional practice! And the songs...I LOVE the songs! Quickly pull up a song to help your students learn any concept. There's even over 70 interactive stories! Can it get any better?! Yes it can!!!! If you follow The Bender Bunch, then you know....WE LOVE SCIENCE! Just look at these Science experiments! Just this section alone is a Science teacher's paradise, with nearly 1,700 experiments to choose from! There's also educational and parenting articles and navigating the site is super user-friendly. You'll need to create a free account to use Education.com and you can do that here. The free basic membership gives you unlimited access to the Science projects and educational articles, but limits your monthly access to the other resources. Every month your allowed downloads is reset though. So if you'll only be using the Science or needing just a couple activities a month, the basic membership will be perfect for you. However, if you want unlimited access and want to get your hands on all of these fabulous resources any time you want, you can upgrade to a premium membership. Get all the worksheets, workbooks, interactive activities, lesson plans, exercises, songs, and stories you want and need, any time you need them, and in one place with the premium membership. It is sooooo worth it! I also like that if you're only interested in the workbooks, you can purchase the workbooks for $4.99 each without having to upgrade to a premium membership. So there's lots of great options to fit everyone's needs. Education.com granted me permission to share a sample activity from the activity section on their site with you. I think I'm going to use it for our Multicultural Family Art Night at school this year. It would also be a great activity for teaching feelings and emotions. I love that for our special needs kiddos, there is no wrong or right when it comes to expressing yourself through art. Sample Activity: Create a Cubist Self-Portrait Is your child a budding artist? Support his creative nature by helping him to learn about art styles, and work on art process explorations. The cubist movement began in the twentieth century with the creation of abstract, broken up works of art. Translate this into a fun activity for young students by encouraging cubism-inspired art made at home.The cubist collage self-portrait activity will help your child to better observe, analyze, and reconstruct his own imaginative thoughts. Additionally, it reinforces basic math skills such as geometry. It promotes self-awareness, and can even help build aesthetic awareness. Moreover, he'll learn a little art history while he's at it!What You Need: Construction paper (at least two pieces) Pencil Scissors Crayons, oil pastels, or markers Mirror What You Do: Ask your child to take a look in the mirror. What does he see? How does the face change with each expression of emotion he makes? Now it's time for your child to create a pencil drawn self-portrait. This can be a close up of just the face, neck, and shoulders or a full length portrait. Have your child color in the pencil self-portrait with crayons or makers. For added fun, try oil pastels. Using these soft, crayons-like utencils is a great way to introduce your child to different artistic tools. After the self-portrait is finished, have your child cut the drawing into pieces that form geometric shapes. Make sure that the pieces are not too small. Have your child rearrange and reassemble the cut-out shapes of his portrait. Then, have him glue them down on a blank sheet of construction paper. He should rearrange them in a way that makes a completely new abstract portrait. Let his imagination run wild! There are no limits to the ways in which he styles his composition. Enjoy your child’s abstract cubist collage! Try extending this project by asking your child to create several self-portrait collages. Each work of art can be varied by altering the facial gestures, their arrangement, and even the colors used. Ask your child to choose colors that connect with the emotion in the drawing. For example, a sad picture may be blue while a happy portrait could be bright yellow. Which resource categories are you most excited about? Sight words will be a primary focus of many of your lessons and activities. Use the helpful list of kindergarten sight words, along with related teaching tips, to help your students establish the strong language arts foundation they need to succeed in elementary school and beyond. The Dolch sight words list is commonly used in elementary school classes. The full list contains more than 200 words, but not all of the terms are designed for use with kindergarten students. There are just over 50 (52 to be exact) kindergarten-specific sight words on the list. Those are the terms you should focus on when teaching basic sight words to kindergarteners. The printable list of the Dolch kindergarten sight words is colorful and visually appealing, so it works well as a handout to share with students. Young children are sure to enjoy reviewing and studying the list! You may want to break the word list down into relatively small alphabetical groupings, starting with the ones that begin with letters "a" through "g." all am are at ate be black brown but came did do eat four get good If you're proceeding alphabetically, move next to the words that start with "h" through "p." have he into like must new no now on our out please pretty The next logical division is the words that begin with "r" through "u." ran ride saw say she so soon that there they this too under Finally, move to words that start with "w" through "y." Please note that the Dolch kindergarten sight words list doesn't include any terms that begin with the letter "z." want was well went what white who will with yes There are many ways to teach sight words to kindergarten students Whatever strategies you use, focus on helping students learn how to recognize and properly use sight words. Start with these lessons to learn kindergarten sight words, which focus on using flashcards, creating an animated movie and writing a song. Include some fun sight word games into your class, such as creating patterns with sight words or scavenger hunts to find hidden sight word flashcards. Challenge students to listen closely for sight words during storytime, and award prizes to the first student who raises a hand when a sight word is spoken. Assign students to come up with original sentences using certain sight words. Start with just one sight word per sentence, then make it more challenging by requiring two or three. Spur creativity by assigning students to work visual representations of one or more sight words into a drawing or other art project. Have students create a greeting card for a parent or other caregiver that features one or more sight words in the design or text. Challenge students to describe designated objects using only sight words. This can be a group, partner or individual activity. Read off a selection of phrases or sentences with sight words and ask students to ring a bell or hold up a card any time you speak one of their sight words. Host a sight word spelling bee, offering prizes to all students who make it through the round without misspelling any terms from the kindergarten sight word list. Engage in a round-robin storytelling game, with each student coming up with a sentence using a sight word. Go around the room in order so that the sentences form a story. Whether the story makes sense or not, it'll be fun and students will get to practice using their sight words. For teaching kindergartners basic sight words, you should consider putting together a lesson plan focused on sight words appropriate for their grade level. Be sure to remember to add the fun into the lesson plans along with structured lessons. Take a close look at the resources you have around you in the classroom. Come up with a few objectives and goals which you would like your kindergartners to accomplish. The next part of your lesson should specify how you intend to teach the reading and spelling of the sight words. Use some of the activity ideas listed above, as well as any other sight word games or teaching methods appropriate for the subject matter. Before you know it you will have a rock-solid plan on how to teach your students about their basic sight words. Need more ways to practice the kindergarten sight words list with your students? These free printable sight word worksheets offer many fun and meaningful opportunities to practice high frequency words! Looking for more sight word worksheets? These kindergarten sight word practice sheets are the perfect way for your kids to practice and master sight words all year long! Each worksheet has 7 sight word activities for students to complete, giving them a lot of exposure to each word. Add them to your lesson plans or centers. They will get to practice reading the word, writing the word, spelling the word, and more on each printable sight word worksheet. These sight word activity sheets are so quick and easy for teachers to prep. All you have to do is print and go! These worksheets are the perfect addition to your morning work routine, literacy lessons, or independent practice time. Plus, they follow the same instructions for each word, so your young students will know exactly what to do each time. These worksheets are great for the kindergarten or first grade level. Check out our editable sight word games too! These printable worksheets are a no-prep wonder! All you have to do is print and go! No cutting, stapling, or laminating required. The sight word worksheets come in black and white, so you can use them even if you don’t have access to colored copies. These sight word worksheets are so easy to differentiate because there are 51 different words included. You can easily assign the word or words that your students need to work on most. You can have all students complete the worksheet for the word they are being introduced to that week. Down the road, if you notice a student or a small group of students struggling with that word, you can reassign it to them to get additional word practice. For students who are ready for more of a challenge, you can assign more difficult sight word worksheets for them to practice reading and writing. Each worksheet follows the same pattern of activities, so you only need to teach them how to use it one time and they’ll be set to successfully complete the rest of the worksheets. These sight word worksheets take typical high frequency sight words practice, like flash cards, to the next level by incorporating a variety of activities to work with each word. If you want to make it even more fun, let your students complete the worksheet using a colored pencil, crayon, or marker! To use the printable sight word worksheets, students will begin by reading the sight word. Next, they will work on writing the word by tracing it, following the arrows to ensure proper writing technique. Then they will write the word independently on the line. Students get to use their creativity to decorate the word written in bubble letters. They also get to be word detectives by finding and circling the sight words hidden in the word search. After that, the students will look at the letters of the alphabet and color in the letters that spell the sight word. Lastly, they will fill in the missing letters in the words at the bottom of the worksheet to spell the word correctly. These sight word worksheets can even be assigned via Google Classroom or Seesaw. You can upload the PDF to the digital learning platform and have them complete it on their device. Another option is to have them complete it and submit a picture. Either way works great! As you can see, they are getting to work with and manipulate each word in various ways, helping them retain the word more effectively. These sight word worksheets are the perfect addition to any kindergarten classroom and will help your students become sight word masters. There are two widely accepted high-frequency sight word lists that are used by teachers and homeschooling parents all over the world. Dolch Sight Words, which is a word list compiled by Dr. Edward William Dolch includes 52 common kindergarten sight words. Fry’s Sight Words, compiled by Dr. Edward Fry covers 100 sight words students should learn during grade 1. If you’re wondering which kindergarten sight word list to use, you can read more about each sight word list here. The free printable sight word teaching resources on this page use Dolch sight word lists for kindergarten. If you’ve decided to use Fry’s 100 Sight Words for Kindergarten, we have a variety of sight word charts, flashcards and printables available as well. However, our suggested method an order is to teach Dolch 220 sight words in Frequency order. Below you’ll find basic sight words kindergarten lists for all 52 Dolch Primer sight words. This is a free printable Kindergarten Sight Words PDF that includes all common and high-frequency words from the Dolch 220 Primer word list. These sight words are in alphabetical order for easy reference. Print this sight word list as a reference chart, for extra practice, or even use it as a sight word preassessment to see how many words your students know! Kindergarten students can learn important sight words in order of frequency. This kindergarten sight word list presents the Dolch 220 Primer sight words in order based on use in texts. This is very helpful for building important reading fluency skills as these are the most common words your young students will come across in early-reader kindergarten books. You might be wondering, what is a sight word? In general, Sight Words are words that cannot be sounded out phonetically and must be read by sight. For example, the word “cat” can be sounded out with individual letter sounds “c—a—t” and thus is not a sight word. However, words like “four” and “she” cannot be sounded out phonetically or broken apart into chunks. These words must be memorized through repetition and exposure, or memorized by sight. This is why they are called sight words. Of course, there are always exceptions to the sight word rule, but this is a good starting point for understanding the purpose of sight words and the need for sight word memorization as an important building block on the road to reading. You can read more about the importance of sight words for kids here. Most commonly, we’ve seen the Dolch Sight Word kindergarten list prevail as the accepted, grade-level specific list of sight words, however, many families and schools continue to use Fry’s 100 Sight Words Lists for kindergarten as well. As Fry’s first 100 words are actually suggested for first grade, some families pull the first 50 words for kindergarten and the second 50 for first grade. You might find that some school districts will use both, or a mixture compiled from each common sight word list.
