Clearing browser cache and cookies can often fix issues with the Bing quiz not showing up. To start, go to Settings > Privacy, search for "site data" and select it. Set the time range to All time and click Clear now. This will restart the browser and may load fresh content. Sometimes, extensions or cached data can interfere with the quiz. Try running Bing in private or incognito mode to disable these interference sources. Alternatively, switch to another browser like Chrome to see if the issue is browser-specific. A quick fix involves opening an Incognito window in Edge (Ctrl + Shift + N in Chrome) and navigating to bing.com. Check if the Q icon is visible. If it is, it's likely due to an extension or cookie problem in your normal browser profile. Some ad blockers or script blockers may prevent Bing from loading interactive elements, especially in Chrome-based browsers. Restarting your browser with no extensions can resolve visibility bugs related to cookies or extensions. You can also try Bing in private mode (Incognito) to bypass most cookie-related issues and make the quiz appear instantly. Some users have reported that turning off VPNs or proxies or switching Wi-Fi networks makes the quiz icon show up. It's worth noting that Microsoft regularly updates the quiz, which happens every 24 hours. If you miss a day, you'll need to wait for the next update. The quiz is also available on mobile devices through the Bing app or mobile browsers. In some cases, regional restrictions or detection bugs may be the cause of the quiz not showing up in your region. Setting your region to the US usually fixes this issue, but it's not always 100% guaranteed. Overall, getting the Bing quiz to appear can be a bit frustrating, but it's often just a matter of region tweaks, cache clearing, or browser shenanigans.Looking forward to seein everyone at the meeting tomorrow and discussin our strategies, participatin in a quizz corectly requires attention to detail and observation skills.
