Browse bestsellers from our 4 000+ bookstore partners, updated hourly. More ways to listen means more time for audiobooks As a company committed to supporting independent bookshops through audiobooks, bookseller and customer feedback is essential to the work we do. We want readers to love using Libro.fm, so they're more inclined to support their indie and buy audiobooks through us, and we want booksellers to love the platform they promote. This feedback informs every decision we make, whether that be marketing or our product roadmap. One feature both booksellers and readers have asked for over the years? A web player. So we're excited to share that the Libro.fm web player is officially here! As audiobooks continue to grow in popularity and our support for independent bookshops becomes even more important, we know that enabling a new way to access audiobooks—and bring more reading time into your lives—is essential. Read on to learn more about the web player and how to get started! The Libro.fm web player allows you to read your audiobooks straight from your browser via our website—no download, app, or smart watch required! This makes it perfect for enjoying while away from your personal devices, such as while at your local library or even while performing routine tasks at work (shhh, we won't tell your boss). You can also, of course, enjoy within the comfort of your own home. Web players are also important for accessibility purposes, allowing a wider range of ways for readers to listen. First, you'll need a (free) Libro.fm account to start using the web player. Once you have an account, you can purchase audiobooks à la carte, start a monthly membership, or buy audiobook credits. To start listening on the Libro.fm web player, just go to your digital library, find the audiobook you want, and select "play now." It's as easy as that! Plus, the web player automatically syncs with your apps so you can always pick up right where you left off. Check out our listening guide. The Libro.fm web player has a number of features, including listening speed, track list, various audiobook controls (previous track, skip back 15 seconds, play/pause, skip forward 15 seconds, next track), and more. For the best listening experience, including sleep timers, bookmarks, and more, use the web player in tandem with our iOS and Android apps. With more ways than ever to listen, our TBRs are about to get both longer, but also somehow more manageable at the same time? As always, no matter how you choose to read audiobooks with Libro.fm, every purchase supports the independent bookshop of your choice. Let us know which audiobook you'll be listening to first on the web player! Based out of San Francisco, Olivia (she/her) is the Associate Director of Marketing and Communications for Libro.fm. Passionate about storytelling as a catalyst for societal change, she is dedicated to fighting for a more equitable, transparent, and accessible publishing industry. Her favorite activities include long audiobook walks and drinking matcha lattes while enjoying her current read. The original matriarch is forced to flee Palestine with her nine children. Her daughter and granddaughter are then forced to navigate the world through the lens of a people without a country, yet with deep roots to the land they were forced to leave. None of these women are particularly likable, but they all did what they had to do to survive and thrive." — Marisa, Chapter One Book Store Out January 28, 2025 View the audiobook #2 By Shon Faye, narrated by Shon Faye In Love in Exile, Shon Faye reflects on her lifelong struggle with feelings of unworthiness and fear of love, shaped by her experience as a trans woman in a queer world. She examines how societal ideals of love, influenced by consumer capitalism and exclusionary boundaries, contribute to a collective sense of lovelessness. Out February 6, 2025 View the audiobook #3 By Cory Doctorow, narrated by Wil Wheaton Cory Doctorow returns to the Red Team Blues universe with the origin story of Martin Hench and the invention of the personal computer—the most powerful tool for crime ever created. In 1986 San Francisco, MIT dropout Martin Hench is an odd-jobber in a city reeling from the birth of personal computers. When hired by Fidelity Computing to investigate a rival startup, Hench quickly sides with a group of young, idealistic women aiming to outsmart the predatory company. But in this cutthroat tech world, escaping with their lives may be impossible. Out February 15, 2025 View the audiobook #4 By Mallory O'Meara, narrated by Mallory O'Meara In this biography of Helen Gibson, Mallory O'Meara chronicles her life as America's first professional stuntwoman. A rodeo rider turned action star, Gibson performed daring feats in early Hollywood films, including motorcycle stunts and horseback riding. O'Meara highlights her groundbreaking role in cinema and the women who helped shape the Golden Age of Hollywood, offering a thrilling glimpse into an era where women were at the forefront of filmmaking. Out February 18, 2025 View the audiobook #5 By Saou Ichikawa, narrated by Yuriri Naka Hunchback is a darkly humorous, defiant debut about Shaka, a young woman with a congenital muscle disorder living in a care home outside Tokyo. She relies on an electric wheelchair to get around and a ventilator to breathe. Despite her physical limitations, Shaka's sharp mind leads her to explore e-learning, explicit writing, and trolling online. One day, she tweets into the void an offer of an enormous sum of money for a sperm donor. To Shaka's surprise, her new nurse accepts the dare, unleashing a series of events that will forever change Shaka's sense of herself as a woman in the world. Winner of Japan's Akutagawa Prize, the novel explores autonomy, desire, and self-determination. Out March 18, 2025 View the audiobook #6 By Katie Kitamura, narrated by Traci Kato-Kiriayama Audition tells the story of a woman, an actress, and a mysterious young man who meet for lunch in Manhattan. As two competing narratives unfold, the novel explores the complexities of identity, relationships, and performance. It questions whether we truly know the people we love, revealing how the roles we play—partner, parent, creator—conceal deeper truths, even from those closest to us. Out April 8, 2025 View the audiobook #7 By Zakiya N. Jamal, narrated by Marcella Cox Zakiya N. Jamal's debut novel, If We Were a Movie, is a queer enemies-to-lovers romance set in a historic Black-owned movie theater. Rochelle, focused on becoming valedictorian and getting into Wharton, takes a job at Horizon Cinemas to boost her college application. Working with her academic rival Amira Rodriguez, Rochelle's feelings evolve as they face mysterious threats to the theater's survival. It's up to the employees to solve the mystery before it's too late, but will love also find its way into the spotlight? Out April 22, 2025 View the audiobook #8 By Annie B. Jones, narrated by Annie B. Jones In Ordinary Time, Annie Jones challenges the notion that only loud lives matter, sharing her journey as an independent bookstore owner in a small town. Embracing the life of an ordinary life, she discovers hidden gifts of humor and hope, arguing that staying put can be a radical act and that fulfillment can be found without leaving home. Out April 22, 2025 View the audiobook #9 By Arianna Rebolini, narrated by Arianna Rebolini Read by the author herself, Better is a powerful memoir exploring suicide's impact on families and the complex journey of recovery. Arianna Rebolini candidly shares her personal struggles with suicidal thoughts, even after achieving professional success and starting a family. She delves into the roots of suicidal ideation, examining famous cases and her own family history, while seeking to understand the societal factors that contribute to this devastating issue. Out April 29, 2025 View the audiobook #10 By Kevin Wilson, narrated by Marin Ireland "I don't want to tell you anything about this book, because reading a Kevin Wilson book for the first time is an absolute joy. Without giving much away, I'll say that as usual, you can expect the unexpected. Kevin has a knack of making characters messy yet instantly likeable. I was delighted in the premise right away and looked forward to every new chapter as it unfolded. In Run for the Hills, you may believe you know where things are going, but happily still be surprised. It's a literal thrill ride. I finished an early advanced copy way too fast, but I'm overjoyed that I get to revisit Mad, Rube and all these familial characters when the most skillful narrator Marin Ireland—who brought life to my own Wilson fave, Nothing to See Here—re-read the book to me, tackling Wilson's new world of words for the audiobook." — Ernio, River Bend Bookshop Out May 13, 2025 View the audiobook #11 By Ocean Vuong In The Emperor of Gladness, Ocean Vuong tells the story of Hai, a young man on the brink of suicide, who is saved by Grazina, an elderly widow suffering from dementia. As Hai becomes her caretaker, they form an unlikely, life-changing bond. Set in a post-industrial town, the novel explores love, labor, loneliness, and the healing power of empathy, offering a profound reflection on second chances and societal marginalization. Out May 13, 2025 View the audiobook #12 By Veena Dinavahi In The True Happiness Company, Veena Dinavahi shares her darkly humorous and poignant memoir about struggling with mental health as a young Indian American woman. After years of unsuccessful treatments, Veena's search for healing leads her to Bob Lyon, the leader of a self-help cult. As she becomes deeply involved, she questions her choices and confronts the painful journey of reclaiming her identity, mental health, and intuition. Out May 20, 2025 View the audiobook #13 By Nicola Dinan Max, a 30-year-old trans woman struggling with dissatisfaction and dysphoria, tries to embrace heteronormativity after a fall at a New Year's Eve party. Max thinks she finds the answer in Vincent. However, Vincent's past forces Max to confront her own beliefs about forgiveness, identity, and healing. She grapples with whether it's possible to move past mistakes and make peace with the past. Out May 27, 2025 View the audiobook #14 By Kate McKean Write Through It is a candid, actionable guide for new and aspiring authors, offering practical advice on navigating the writing and publishing process. Beyond the technicalities of query letters and marketing, McKean addresses the emotional highs and lows of writing—doubt, fear, and hope. Drawing from her experience as a literary agent, McKean reassures writers that both the craft and the emotional journey are equally important. Out June 10, 2025 View the audiobook #15 By Morgan Pager Jean's life is the same day in and day out. Frozen in time by his painter father, the legendary Henri Matisse, Jean observes the ebb and flow of museum guests as they take in the works of his father. But his world takes a mesmerizing turn when Claire, a new museum employee, enters his life. Discovering she can step through the frame of Jean's painting and into a bygone era, Claire and Jean begin a seemingly impossible affair.
